'Buy Coal Now' Is Advice Of Head Of Illinois State Council Of Defense

Chicago, July 14—"Chicago people should buy and store their coal now for use next winter," said Samuel Insull, chairman of the State Council of National Defense, and his advice can well be heeded by all Illinois people.

"Whether or not the price is as low as it should be is beside the question. If we do not buy and store coal now it is doubtful whether we shall be able to get it in the fall at any price. Investigation shows that the demand for coal produced in the Illinois district this year will be greater than last year or year before. And the supply of railroad cars for moving this coal will be greatly overtaxed. Unless the mines are kept working at full capacity all this summer and all the available cars are used in bringing the coal to Chicago I am certain we shall have a coal famine next winter.

Vast Troop Movement.

Beginning next month the national guard and the new national army will be mobilized in their great training camps in various parts of the country. The railroads will be called on to move 1,000,000 men, with all their vast stores and equipment and supplies. These great military cities must be kept constantly supplied with foodstuffs, fuel, army material. Think of what an enormous strain that vast amount will put on the resources of the railroads!

The state council feels that every civilian should get his coal and so far as possible his other supplies into storage before that great military movement begins.

HOLDS TWO ALLEGED MURDERERS OF FAHEY

FOREIGNERS ARRESTED BY THE WHITESIDE COUNTY AUTHORITIES.

CLAIM TO HAVE STRONG PROOF

Countryman of Two Suspects Is Said To Have Given Officers Information.

Morrison, July 14—Michael Zanchich and Michael A. Krajnovich have been arrested by Special Officer Nielson of the Northwestern railway, Marshal P. C. Farley of Fulton and Sheriff Harry T. Berry of Morrison, charged with the murder of Frank Fahey at the cars in the South Fulton yards Sunday night.

Evidence is said to be very strong against the men, especially the former, who has a reputation as a bad man among his countrymen and who, it is alleged by the officers, was arrested last fall on charge of killing a man, but was released from custody before he was given a hearing.

Arraignment Today.

The suspects were taken from the Morrison jail to Fulton for preliminary hearing. Sheriff Berry and States Attorney Ludens of Sterling look after the prosecution.

The funeral of Fahey was held from the home of Wm. Doran in Lyons, Ia., Wednesday. Interment was in Calvary cemetery.

Countryman Tells.

Marshal Farley and Special Officer Nielson were working on the case all day and took the men from work and down to the camp where they were questioned regarding the affair. Nothing could be learned from the men at that time which would warrant the officers in placing them under arrest.

They were released after thorough search of the bunks had been made for firearms, etc. Not a gun or revolver could be found in any of the cars.

The officers returned to Fulton and about 7 o'clock that evening a fellow countryman, an Austrian, approached Marshal Farley and asked him why he had not placed the two men under arrest he was questioning that afternoon, saying they did the shooting. He asked the officers to give him time to get back to camp before they came to arrest the men as he would probably suffer the same fate as Fahey if the men in camp knew he told. This the officer did, and for the same reason he is keeping the name of the informant to himself so he will not be in danger from his own countrymen.

The horse dragged Mr. Shippett about 150 feet, and at first it was not thought he had suffered injuries other than cuts and bruises, for he got up and walked unassisted to the house. Later in the evening, however, evidences of the concussion appeared and the services of a Dixon surgeon were secured. Today it was believed he was out of danger.

GEN. PERSHING GOT ONE PORTION SUGAR

(Associated Press)

London, June 28—(Correspondence)—Major General Pershing, commander of the American expeditionary force in France, seated for tea on the beautiful Thames Terrace of the house of commons with Col. Astor as his host, had an experience in England's war rationing when he found he could not have sugar in his tea and on his strawberries as well.

"You may have but one portion of sugar, two-sevenths of an ounce," the waitress informed him with a quiet air of preciseness, and the general promptly chose sugarless strawberries, remarking that the sun, as though anxious to compensate, had sweetened the strawberries so well sugar was not essential.

In the bounteous times of peace, the house of commons waitresses used to trip about the Terrace during the fine June afternoons with big bowls of white powdered sugar and lavish jugs of cream. Now the sugar is strictly rationed and the amount of cream that may be used is limited to one small measured portion for each person.

GERMAN CRISIS OVER-SHADOWS MILITARY NEWS

REICHSTAG HAS GONE ON A STRIKE AGAINST MILITARY PARTY.

REPORT KAISER'S ABDICATION

Officials, However, Discredit Rumor Which is Entirely Lacking of Confirmation.

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

Petrograd, July 14—The Russian troops have occupied the village of Novica, southwest of Kalusz in eastern Galicia, the war office announced today.

Germany's serious internal crisis overshadows the military operations in the news of the day.

Reports from Berlin show that the reichstag has gone on strike against the military party, apparently in the interest of a parliamentary system of government.

There is even a rumor, although unconfirmed and little credited, that Emperor William had abdicated in favor of his sixth and favorite son, Prince Joachim.

Peace Clamor Grows.

The peace clamor is growing both in Germany and Austria-Hungary. A part of the trouble between the reichstag and the governing class is over the government's failure to state its peace terms on a basis of no annexation.

Apparently the crown prince is waging a fight for control on behalf of the military interests.

Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg is under fire from the crown prince and his supporters, the chancellor seemingly being too liberally inclined.

Russian forces are pushing on east of Lomnica, and are generally proving victors on a fifty-mile front.

There has been only local fighting on the west front.

How Water Puts Out Fire.

Water puts out fire for two good reasons. First, if a thing is covered with water, the oxygen of the air cannot get at it to burn it. But that is not nearly the most important reason why water puts out fire. It is that water has a great capacity for heat, and can hold a great deal of it. It takes so much heat into itself, and so quickly, that it lowers the temperature of the burning thing so that it can no longer burn.

PRIZE WINNING ESSAY ON PAUL JONES

America has the honor to own one of the greatest men in history whose biography is written in English, French and Russian. Such is the life of Paul Jones, founder of the American Navy. Although born an Englishman, he fought bravely for the American liberty. He was born in Arbigland Kirkenbright, England, July 6, 1747. He was of common birth, being the youngest of seven children of John Paul, a fisherman and gamekeeper to Robert Craik who was a wealthy country squire in England.

His mother was the daughter of a highland gunsmith by trade. When a small girl, her parents moved to the lowlands but she was born a "Highland lassie".

John Paul inherited his mother's qualities—a suddenness of temper, exultant valor, and deathly grit that made him conquer where others would have failed. He did not possess the peaceful characteristics of his Britain father, but rather those of his mother's rapacious ancestors in Grampian Hills. He had a meager childhood. The Parish school was the only institution of learning. His studies were ever and again interrupted by the hard necessity of help ing earn a humble living for the large family.

Even at the age of twelve, his love of the sea, his fitness for its attainments, and his disregard of its risks and perils, had become the topics of comment throughout the neighborhood.

In the summer of 1759, Mr. James Younger, Esq., was looking for sailors for the ship, Chesapeake, about to sail for America. He became well impressed by John Paul's skillful manning of a small fishing yawl against an unyielding north-west squall. When he had landed Mr. Younger asked Paul's father to let him go as master's apprentice on this ship. Either by the flattering of the father or the opportunities before the boy, the father consented to let him go.

Little John Paul had often implored his father to let him go to the New World where his oldest brother, whom he had never seen had found home and fortune. Now that long looked for time had come.

His brother, William Paul Jones, then a man of thirty, lived with his foster-father on a large plantation in Virginia, near where John Paul and his ship anchored.

William Paul Jones' adopted father took a great liking to John Paul and wished to adopt him also as he had his brother, William. John Paul preferred the sea career, so he returned to Whitehaven with Mr. Younger in the spring of 1760.

John Paul continued to work for Mr. Younger for four years. At the end of that time Mr. Younger retired from his work and released John Paul from his apprenticeship. He with his mate decided to try the slave trade along the African coast which was considered an honorable business at that time. After two years of such work he sold his interest to Captain Denbigh and decided to visit his brother, William, in Virginia, and then go home to England. He was unable to go to Virginia so he boarded an English bound ship. About half way there, yellow fever broke out, killing the captain and all but five of the crew. John Paul brought the valuable cargo safely to England with himself in command. The ship owners were so pleased that they gave him a ten per cent share of the valuable cargo brought home. In the meantime, had died and by his will bequeathed his brother William's foster father ed to John Paul, his estate, after the death of his brother, William, without heirs, provided that John Paul would add to his name, as his brother had done, the name of Jones. This, John Paul agreed to do.

John Paul proved to be a very capable captain and made many voyages to and from America and to many islands in the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans. During all this time he had led a very far-reaching life. He had mastered the French and Spanish languages. More than half of his life had been spent at sea. He was never satisfied but always self-educating. He had an almost miraculous memory and had a great command of language. His mind was stored with anecdotes and experiences and rich observations which made him foremost in the minds of the people in all parts where his ship anchored. John Paul was a student linguist and an all round man as well as master of his own profession. He was very strict with his sailors but he hated the cat-o-nine-tails and in two of his voyages he threw it out the first day.

HOME CANNING

The National Emergency Food Garden Commission, 219-220 Maryland Building, Washington, D. C., full address is given in order that anyone desiring the pamphlet may send for it—has issued a Home Canning Manual for vegetables and fruits for 1917; that will be found very useful by the economical housewife who wishes to save the surplus from garden and orchard, and as it behooves all of us to be economical this year, that means every housewife. Some excerpts are made from the manual as so many women read in requests in regard to the best ways to can, especially vegetables.

Methods of Canning

There are five principal methods of canning. (1) the Cold-pack, Single-period method; (2) the Intermittent, or Fractional Sterilization Method; (3) the Cold-water Method; (4) the Open Kettle or Hot-pack Method; and, (5) the Vacuum seal Method.

No. 1. The Cold-pack Method.—Which the best method for home canning. A serviceable Cold-pack home canning outfit may be made of materials found in any household. All that is necessary is a vessel to hold the jars or cans. This vessel should have a tight fitting cover. Provide a false bottom of wood or a wire rack to allow for free circulation of water under the containers. The wood bottom may be of perforated boards or of laths nailed to three cross-pieces. If the boiler is deep enough to accommodate two tiers of containers, place a rack on the tops of the lower row to support the top tier. There are many canning outfits on the market which may be bought at prices varying from $5.00 to $50, but the above home made outfit answers the purpose just as well.

Directions for Cold-pack Method

1. Select sound vegetables and fruits. (If possible can them the same day they are picked.) Wash, clean, and prepare them.

2. Have ready, on the stove, a can or pail of boiling water.

3. Place the vegetables or fruits in cheese-cloth or in some other porous receptacle—a wire basket is excellent—for dipping and blanching them in the boiling water.

4. Put them whole into the boiling water. (Time-table for blanching given later).

5. The blanching time varies from one to twenty minutes, according to the vegetable or fruit. When the blanching is complete remove the vegetables or fruits from the boiling water and plunge them a number of times into cold water, to harden the pulp and check the flow of coloring matter.

6. The containers should be thoroughly clean. It is not necessary to sterilize the jars in steam or boiling water before filling them for the reason that in the Cold-pack process both the insides of containers and the contents are sterilized. The jars should be heated before the cold product is put in them.

7. Pack the product into the containers, leaving about a quarter of an inch of space at the top.

8. With vegetables add one level teaspoonful of salt to each quart container and fill with boiling water. With fruits use syrups, as instructed in directions for individual fruits given later.

9. With glass jars always use a new rubber. Test the rubber by stretching or turning inside out. Fit on the rubber and put the lid in place. If the container has a screw top do not screw up as hard as possible, but use only the thumb and lift the finger in tightening it. This makes it possible for steam generated within to escape and prevents breakage. If a glass top jar is used, snap the top ball only, leaving the lower ball loose during sterilization. Tin cans should be completely sealed.

10. Place the filled and capped containers on the rack in the sterilizer. If the homemade or commercial hot water bath outfit is used, enough water should be in the boiler to come at least one inch above the tops of the containers, and the water, in boiling out, should never be allowed to drop to the level of these tops. Begin to count processing time when the water begins to boil.

11. Consult the time-table and at the end of sterilizing period remove the containers from the sterilizer. Fasten the covers on tightly at once, turn containers upside down to test for leakage, leave in this position until cold, and then store in cool, dry place. Be sure that no draft is allowed to blow on glass jars while they are cooling as it may cause leakage, leave in this position until cold, and then store in cool, dry place. Be sure that no draft is allowed to blow on glass jars while they are cooling as it may cause breakage.

12. If jars are to be stored where there is strong light, wrap them in paper, preferably brown, as light will fade the color of products canned in glass jars, and sometimes deteriorate the food value.

Importance of Blanching

The blanching of vegetables removes excess acids, improving the flavor. It also causes some shrinkage so that a larger quantity may be packed in a container. The blanching and cold dip cause vegetables to retain their original coloring which enhances their appearance.

Vegetable Canning in Cold Pack

Vegetables may be divided into five classes, all the vegetables of each class being sterilized by practically the same process under the Cold-pack method. These classes are: (1) Vegetable greens; (2) roots and tubers; (3) tomatoes and corn; (4) pumpkin and squash; (5) pod vegetables, such as beans, peas, and okra. Directions for these various classes are given herewith.

Vegetable Greens.—Besides spinach, dandelions, and kindred greens this class includes cabbage, Brussels sprouts, and cauliflower. Greens should be trimmed, the old leaves and coarse stems removed, and the greens then blanched in steam from 15 to 20 minutes, in a regular steamer or in any other closed receptacle in which the greens will be suspended or raised above the water. After blanching they should be plunged into cold water. They are then packed tight in containers. If one wishes one may season with meat, olive oil, etc., to taste. Add hot water to fill up the crevices and sterilize two hours in the hot-water bath outfit.

Root or Tuber Vegetables.—This class includes carrots, parsnips, beets, turnips, and sweet potatoes. After being thoroughly washed and scrubbed with a vegetable brush they should be scalded long enough to loosen the skin. Plunge them immediately into cold water, then scrape or pare off the skin. They may be packed whole or cut into cubes. Fill containers with boiling water, with one level teaspoonful of salt to each quart container. Loosely seal and sterilize one and a half hours in hot water bath outfit. Cool and store.

Tomatoes.—These demand special canning recipes. Scald the tomatoes enough to loosen the skin. Then plunge them into cold water, core and skin, and pack them whole. Do not put in any hot water, but add a level teaspoonful of salt to each quart container. Loosely seal and sterilize 22 minutes in hot-water bath outfit. Tighten covers, invert containers to cool and test, wrap in paper and store.

Corn on the Cob.—Be sure to have fresh corn. After removing the husks and silk blanch the corn on the cob from five to fifteen minutes. Then plunge it into cold water and pack the ears, alternating the butts and tips, in half-gallon containers. Fill the containers with boiling water and put two level teaspoonfuls of salt in each gallon. Sterilize the partially sealed containers three hours in the hot-water bath outfit.

Tighten covers, tip the containers on their sides to cool, wrap in paper, and store.

Corn off the Cob.—If you do not care to can corn on the cob—and be cause of the scarcity of containers this year it is better not to do so—after blanching slice the corn from the cob with a thin, sharp knife. Pack the sliced corn in containers, add a level teaspoonful of salt to each quart, fill with hot water, and sterilize for three hours as in the case of corn on the cob.

Pumpkin and Squash.—For pie filling cut pumpkin or squash into small pieces, then cook for thirty minutes, so that it becomes pulp. Add one cup of sugar and one teaspoonful of salt to each quart of pulp. After partially sealing sterilize ninety minutes in hot-water bath outfit. Cool, wrap and store. Pumpkin or squash may also be put in cubic form for special uses, such as frying, creaming, or baking. To do this blanch for ten minutes, dip into cold water, pack into containers, fill each container with boiling water and add one level teaspoonful of salt to each quart, but no sugar. Sterilize for ninety minutes in the hot-water bath outfit.

Pod Vegetables.—Such vegetables as lima beans, string beans, peas and okra should be blanched in boiling water from two to five minutes, plunged into cold water, and packed. Fill container with boiling water, adding a level teaspoonful of salt to each quart. Sterilize two hours in hot-water bath outfit. Cool and store.

COL. BENJAMIN E. HERBERT.

By the sudden death of Col. Benjamin E. Herbert of Chicago, newspaper circles of the United States are called upon to mourn the loss of a successful publisher, a courageous editor, a forceful writer, a charming companion and a true friend.

The circumstances of his going were unusual.

Years ago Colonel Herbert founded the National Editorial association, made up of newspaper publishers, largely from the smaller cities throughout the country.

A few days ago delegates to the annual convention of this association were on their way to Minneapolis.

They stopped off at a Minnesota city where a bronze memorial to Col. Herbert was unveiled.

The subject of this signal honor was on the program for remarks but was so overcome with emotion that he could not reply.

Arriving at Minneapolis Colonel Herbert was seized with illness and shortly after passed away.

No convention of newspaper men in the country and particularly in Illinois and the middle west was considered complete unless Colonel Herbert was there to offer his kindly counsel.

The publisher of a magazine devoted to publishing interests, the National Printer-Journalist, Colonel Herbert was singularly qualified to speak at all times upon the problems that came before the newspaper and magazine men and women.

Colonel Herbert lived a long and very useful life.

A thorough-going optimist, trouble could not banish the smile from his face, and his presence in any group was a guarantee that comradeship and good cheer reigned.

The bronze tablet recently unveiled will preserve his memory for coming generations of publishers, but to those who knew him, the material memory is as nothing compared with the touch of his personality.

TAKE UP THE SLACK.

Herbert Hoover's report to President Wilson proves what the people in general have long believed, namely, that the food speculators were at the bottom of the extortionate prices in this country.

As Mr. Hoover points out, the farmer who is the producer and the housewife who is the consumer, are both at the mercy of this band of high-binders who would sacrifice their nation's welfare to line their own pockets with money.

The figures Mr. Hoover gives tell the story.

Last year's crop averaged the farmer $1.51 a bushel, yet wheat sold as high as $3.25 on the Chicago market and the price of flour (based on the speculative price of wheat, not the actual price) raised the cost to the consumer all the way from 50 to 100 per cent, while the producer gained absolutely nothing.

Another observation of Mr. Hoover's should not be forgotten:

"This unbearable increase is due not only to rank speculation but more largely to the wide margin of profit demanded by every link in the chain."

The duty of the hour is to take up the slack.

As Mr. Hoover urges, legislation must come if the food supply of the country is to be kept out of the hands of speculators.

HURRAH! RINGLING DAY ALMOST HERE

BIG CIRCUS AND GREAT SPECTACLE. OCCUPY FIVE TRAINS FILLED WITH WONDERS

The big events for which youngsters and grownups have been impatiently waiting is drawing near for on Wednesday, July 18, Ringling Brothers' circus is to exhibit afternoon and night in Mendota. Expectancy never ran so high before and it is likely this district will send a large delegation to feed the elephants. Unusual interest centers around the gigantic spectacle "Cinderella" with which the famous showmen are this season opening their wonderful main tent program. "Cinderella" is probably the best loved of all fairy tales and to see it produced with more than 1000 persons, hundreds of dancing girls and glorious pageants, indeed gives promise of making childhood's golden dreams come true. In the same great tent will come the marvelous circus numbers in which 400 men and women performers, scores of trained animals and galaxy of special features are introduced. The majority of the acts are entirely new to America, the Ringling Bros., having secured the pick of all European performers who have been obliged to seek engagements in this country. The all-new street parade will take place show day morning.

Hupp Motor Car Corporation, Detroit, Mich.

The Car of the American Family

A National Reputation Made International

We believe the Hupmobile to be the best car of its class in the world.

Evidence of an extraordinary sort supports this conviction.

The work it is doing the world over is nothing short of wonderful.

In Bombay, India, it has been given semi-official recognition.

Hupmobiles Kept;
Other Cars Sold

No other car will be used there, hereafter, by the British government.

At the end of the campaign in German East Africa, the British government sold at auction all the surplus motor cars in its possession.

These cars have been used in its war operations.

The government ordered, however, that all its Hupmobiles should be retained in service; and has since ordered several hundred more Hupmobiles for military use.

Border Performance Called Remarkable

On our own border, reports of Hupmobile performance are so remarkable that, for military reasons, propriety forbids their publication.

In the mountains of Mexico, Hupmobiles owned by the rebel chieftain Villa have borne the brunt of his road operations. His representatives have sought, and been refused, two hundred Hupmobiles to be used as the backbone of their army transport system.

War Work Shows Greater Value

These evidences of rugged fitness for war work are merely side-lights, which make the greater value of the Hupmobile stand out in bold relief.

That greater value is in the service of the home. Not without reason has the Hupmobile been called the car of the American family.

It is the car of cars for the domestic circle—seeking service free from excessive cost.

Re-Sale Value Very High

It is economical because of its simple four-cylinder construction, standardized by years of progression. It is rugged; it is superlatively smooth; and it is astonishingly swift in pick up.

It asks no odds on any point of performance, from any multi-cylinder car it may meet in competition. It has a very high re-sale value.

Safe, Sound Sure Investment

From every angle, it is not only a most excellent and efficient motor car—but a safe, a sure and a sound investment.

Year-Ahead Beauty Features

Over and above its reputation for ruggedness, the new Hupmobile has won recognition as the year-ahead beauty-car. The following are typical of its 25 new style features:
Bright finish, long grain;
French seam upholstery;
Improved cushions and lace type back springs in seats;
Leather-covered molding finish along edges of upholstery;
Neverleak top, black outside, tan inside—waterproof;
Tonneau gipsy quarter curtains integral with top;
Front and rear edges of top finished with leather-covered molding.

Hupmobile-Bishop door-curtain carriers, folding with curtains—exclusive;
Bright leather hand grip-pads on doors;
Large door pockets with special weighted flaps;
Body a new color—Hupmobile blue;
New variable dimming device, graduates brilliance of headlights;
New soft operating clutch;
Four Models—Two Chassis:
Five-passenger Touring Car, Roadster, Sedan—119 inch wheelbase; seven-passenger Touring Car—134-inch wheelbase.

To repeat—now, more than ever, we believe the Hupmobile to be the best car of its class in the world.

SAID HE NOMINATED BRYAN; TO ASYLUM

Danville Attorney Freed by Proving Self Otherwise Lucid.

DANVILLE, ILL., July 14. After being confined for six weeks in a hospital for the insane at Washington, William L. Cundiff, Danville attorney, has succeeded in getting a new hearing and convincing the court he is sane.

Cundiff, connected with the census bureau, was believed by attendants to be crazy when he told them he was a personal friend of William Jennings Bryan, and the man who nominated Mr. Bryan for congress at Weeping Water, Neb., in 1890. Through a visitor he got word to Mr. Bryan and obtained a hearing before Judge Siddons and a jury.

Cundiff defended himself. He convinced court attaches and jurors within five minutes that he was wrongly held. Judge Siddons said that his argument was the most logical and most sound legally of any he has heard recently.

DECLARES COAL TOO CHEAP

Head of Miners' Union Says People
Ought to Pay More.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., July 14. President Frank Farrington of the United Mine Workers of America is not sure that the coal rate fixed by the federal trade commission at the recent hearing at Washington is not a just one. Neither is he certain that it is not too high. The miners' head was seen as he sat in the outer chamber of the governor's office to see the executive regarding appointments.

"The trouble with the people of Illinois is that they have been getting their coal too cheap. Now that it is going to cost them about what it is worth they are complaining. I believe after they get used to the new rate it will not seem so high," he said in conclusion.

STATES CALLED ON FOR QUOTAS

President Notifies Governors Nation Will Draft 687,000.

500,000 TO FORM NEW ARMY

President Will as Last Act Outline
Plans Governing Drawings—Operation of Draft Law Falls Heavily on Americans in States With Many Foreigners.

Washington, July 14.—The government notified each state of the number of men it will be called upon to furnish in the draft.

The first call will be for 687,000 men. They will form a national army of 500,000 and the other 187,000 will be employed to fill the ranks of the regular army and national guard to war strength.

New York must furnish the most men. The Empire state is called upon for 69,241 conscripts, the figures being based on ratio of population. Pennsylvania must supply 60,859 and Illinois, 51,653. Oregon with 717, is the lowest among the states. Alaska, with 696, is called upon for the smallest number of any of the states or territories. The District of Columbia, in which Washington, the seat of government, is located, must furnish 929 men.

Announcement of the number of men each state would be called upon to supply was wired to the governors together with instructions approved by the President to immediately apportion each quota among the various districts of the state.

This will involve a great amount of detailed statistical labor and probably will not be completed until after the draft.

The final step will be announcement by President Wilson of the regulations to govern the drawing. These will not be made public until the morning of the drawing, in order to prevent any sharpers attempting schemes to evade service.

The state quotas are based upon population as estimated by the census bureau. Two estimates were made, one for the registration and the other for the draft. In some states they showed a considerable divergence. The second estimate was used as the basis for the draft quotas.

Americans Bear Burden.

The unequal burden which will be imposed upon certain states and cities by the presence of large numbers of foreign born slackers was made the subject of a speech to the house by Congressman Rogers of Massachusetts.

Mr. Rogers pointed out that these slackers are enumerated as part of the total population of each city, state or other sub-division. Accordingly when the quota of each sub-division is fixed upon the basis of population, and these slackers are exempted from service, a larger number of American born citizens will be required to make up the quota. States which have a very high percentage of aliens, such as Arizona, Massachusetts and New York will have to bear more than their share of the burden.

Mr. Rogers insisted that the conscription law should be changed or that the government should take up with foreign governments some diplomatic negotiations to force the alien slackers into service.

Mr. Rogers said the only way to remedy this inequality was to base the quotas of states upon the total population thereof liable for military service instead of upon the total population.

National Guard Assignments.

Washington July 14.—The war department made public a complete list of assignment of national guard divisions to training camps in the south and west.

The assignments follow: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut to Charlotte, N. C. New York to Spartanburg, S. C. Pennsylvania to Augusta, Ga. New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia to Anniston, Ala. North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee to Greenville, S. C. Alabama, Georgia and Florida to Macon, Ga. Michigan and Wisconsin to Waco, Texas. Illinois to Houston, Texas. Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska to Deming, N. M. Kansas and Missouri to Fort Sill, Okla. Texas and Oklahoma to Fort Worth, Texas. Ohio and West Virginia to Montgomery, Ala. Kentucky and Indiana to Hattiesburg, Miss. Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana to Alexandria, La. California, Utah, Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and Nevada to Linda Vista, Cal. Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho and Wyoming to Palo Alto, Cal.

Hunger Causes German Unrest.

Washington, July 14.—The state department issued through the Creel committee a summary of its news from Germany. Hunger among the poorer classes and the knowledge that only with the coming of peace can they get proper nourishment is assigned as the basic causes of the present political upheaval.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hoffman of Woodstock spent last night at the Charles Lambert home.

Increase Corn Yield By Thinning Plants.

Thinning corn has resulted in a gain, as a 4-year average at the Ohio Experiment Station, of 6.31 bushels per acre in the case of seed tested for germination before planting, and of 8.47 bushels in the case of untested seed. The average time required for thinning an acre of corn was 5.7 hours.

In one case three kernels were planted per hill, and on the plot in comparison a generous quantity of seed was dropped and the plants were thinned to three per hill when 6 to 8 inches high. With tested seed an average yield of 59.28 bushels per acre was obtained with corn planted three kernels per hill, and 65.59 bushels per acre was harvested from thinned corn. With untested seed a yield of 55.38 bushels per acre was secured from regular planting and 63.85 bushels per acre where the corn was thinned. With corn at only 50 cents a bushel, one would make 65 cents an hour by thinning on this basis.

It is estimated, from a recent investigation made by the Bureau of Crop Estimates, United States Department of Agriculture, that nearly 56 per cent of the apple crop is sold from farm or orchard, 10 per cent is used in the manufacture of cider, 19 per cent is consumed on the farm for food purposes, and the remaining 15 per cent is wasted or eaten by live stock.

Oil mills on the Pacific coast have been operating for several years with soy beans imported from Manchuria and have found a ready sale in that region for the oil, cake, and other products.

S. L. Shaw of Lee Center was here today.

How About Other Senses?

"The sense of direction is so strongly developed in the average man," stated Professor Pate, "that he can rise in the middle of the darkest night that ever was, unerringly find his way clear through the house to a burglar proof safe, work the combination without a light, take out a bottle of hair restorer and drink heartily of its contents by mistake for the cough remedy which stands on the little table beside his bed."—Kansas City Star.

Oldest Tin Mines.

The tin deposits in the south of England are the oldest known workings in the world, and perhaps those that were next discovered and opened were in Saxony and Bohemia. It is believed that the manufacture of tinplate, or, as it is sometimes called, "terne-plate," was begun in Bohemia early in the seventeenth century, that it spread from there to Saxony, and it was introduced into England in the latter half of the seventeenth century.

Brazil Immensely Rich. Brazil is immensely rich, and the minerals are very considerable and valuable, comprising gold, silver, iron, diamonds, topazes and other precious stones.

His Inference. "He said when he got up to speak at our meeting his eyes met a forest of faces." "All wooden heads, I suppose he meant."

"TOO much prosperity!"—that's all we need fear according to Secretary's McAdoo's speech a few weeks ago before the Advertising Clubs of America. I guess he's right. Just supplying each others wants keeps business humming. But look at us—with nearly the whole world besides clamoring for what we produce. We simply can't, by any law of economies, escape having even greater prosperity.

President Wilson says not to "allow any slowing up of business." So buy that good reliable Haynes you've set your heart on. No sense in letting that money "loaf." You don't get any fun out of it that way and its idleness only throws sand in the gear-box of prosperity.

Don't deprive yourself of enjoying a Haynes "Light Six"—with its 1 to 60 mile flexibility on high gear—its smooth pick-up from 0 to 30 miles in 7 1-2 seconds—its ability to "eat" the high hills on high—its GREATER PULLING POWER, at moderate speeds and through bad going, than other like-sized motors possess.

Don't drive a car that's costly for up-keep—don't walk or "borrow" rides—when 3 1/2 c per mile is a Haynes costs for GAS, TIRES, oil and repairs (as reported by 1200 different owners.)

Perhaps you'd rather own a Haynes "Light Twelve." In a Haynes "Light Twelve" racer a non-professional driver set two new records and won first by clipping off 100 miles at 89 miles per hour, without a stop, at the Chicago Speedway Races, June 16th.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—On a trip through the English Cumberland country the breakdown of her automobile forces Louise Maurel, a famous London actress, to spend the night at the farm home of John and Stephen Strangeway.

CHAPTER II—At dinner Louise discovers that the brothers are woman-hating recluses.

CHAPTER III—Next morning she discovers that John, the younger brother, has recently come into a large fortune. In company with him she explores the farm.

CHAPTER IV—In a talk with him she is disturbed by his rigid moral principles and finds that his wealth has created no desire for any other life than the simple one he is leading. She tells him her name and that she is the friend of the prince of Seyre, a rich and disreputable neighbor.

CHAPTER V—Three months later, unable to rid himself of the memory of the actress and in spite of his brother's protests, John goes to London.

CHAPTER VII.

The first few minutes that John spent in Louise's little house were full of acute and vivid interest. The room that he was so eagerly studying confirmed his cloudy impressions of its owner. There was, for a woman's apartment, a curious absence of ornamentation and knickknacks. The walls were black and white; the carpet was white; the furniture graceful in its outline, rather heavy in build, and covered with old-rose colored chintz. There were water-colors upon the wall, some small black-and-white fantasies, puzzling to John, who had never even heard the term futurist. A table, drawn up to the side of one of the easy chairs, was covered with books and magazines, some Italian, a few English, the greater part French; and upon a smaller one, close at hand, stood a white bowl full of pink roses. Their odor was somehow reminiscent of Louise, curiously sweet and wholesome—an odor which suddenly took him back to the morning when she had come to him from under the canopy of apple-blossom. His heart began to beat with pleasure even before the opening of the door announced her presence. She came in with Sophie, who at once seated herself by his side.

"We have been making plans," Louise declared, "for disposing of you for the rest of the day."

John smiled happily.

"You're not sending me away, then? You're not acting this evening?"

"Not until three weeks next Monday," she replied. "Then, if you are good, and the production is not postponed, you may seat yourself in a box and make all the noise you like after the fall of the curtain. These are real holidays for me, except for the nuisance of rehearsals. You couldn't have come at a better time."

Sophie glanced at the clock.

"Well," she said, "I must show my respect to that most ancient of adages by taking my departure. I feel—"

"You will do nothing of the sort, child," Louise interrupted. "I want to interest you in the evolution of Mr. Strangeway. We must remember that it is his first night in London. What aspect of it shall we attempt to show him? Don't say a word, Sophie. It is not for us to choose."

"I'm afraid there isn't any choice," John declared, his face falling. "I haven't any clothes except what you see me in."

"Ho-ho!" Sophie exclaimed. "Off with your smart gown, Louise! We'll be splendidly Bohemian. You shall put on your black frock and a black hat, and powder your nose, and we'll all go to Guido's first and drink vermouth. I can't look the part, but I can act it!"

"But tell me," Louise asked him, "did you lose your luggage?"

"I brought none," he answered.

They both looked at him—Sophie politely curious, Louise more deeply interested.

"You mean," Louise demanded, "that after waiting all these months you started away upon impulse like that—without even letting your brother know or bringing any luggage?"

"That's exactly what I did," John agreed, smiling. "I had a sovereign in my pocket when I had bought my ticket. The joke of it was," he went on, joining in the girls' laughter, "that Mr. Appleton has been worrying me for months to come up and talk over investments, and take control of the money my uncle left me; and when I came at last, I arrived like a pauper. He went out himself and bought my shirt."

"And a very nice shirt, too," Sophie declared, glancing at the pattern. "Do tell us what else happened?"

"Well, not much more," John replied. "Mr. Appleton stuffed me full of money and made me take a little suite of rooms at what he called a more fashionable hotel. He stayed to lunch with me, and I have promised to see him on business tomorrow morning."

The two girls sat up and wiped their eyes.

"Oh, this is a wonderful adventure you have embarked upon!" Louise exclaimed. "You have come quite in the right spirit. It is your first night here, Mr. Strangeway, so I warn you that Sophie is the most irresponsible and capricious of all my friends."

Sophie made a grimace.

"Mr. Strangeway," she begged earnestly, "you won't believe a word she says, will you? All my life I have been looking for a single and steadfast attachment. Of course, if Louise wants to monopolize you, I shall fall into the background, as I usually do; but if you think that I am going to accept hints and let you go out to dinner alone, you are very much mistaken. Tonight, at any rate, I insist upon coming!"

"We Shall Have to Put Up With Her," She Told John With a Little Grimace.

Louise shook her head.

"We shall have to put up with her," she told John with a little grimace.

The door of the room was suddenly opened. The parlor maid stood at one side.

"The prince of Seyre, madam," she announced.

Louise nodded. She was evidently expecting the visit. She turned to John.

"Will you come back and call for us here—say at seven o'clock? Mind, you are not to bother about your clothes, but to come just as you are. I can't tell you," she added under her breath, "how much I am looking forward to our evening!"

Sophie sprang to her feet.

"Won't you drop me, please, Mr. Strangeway?" she asked. "Then, if you will be so kind, you can pick me up again on your way here. You'll have to pass where I live, if you are at the Milan. I must go home and do my little best to compete."

Louise's frown was so slight that even John failed to notice it. Upon the threshold they encountered the prince, who detained John for a moment.

"I was hoping that I might meet you here, Mr. Strangeway," he said. "If you are in town for long, it will give me great pleasure if I can be of any service to you. You are staying at a hotel?"

"I am staying at the Milan," John replied.

"I will do myself the pleasure of calling upon you," the prince continued. "In the meantime, if you need any service that a Londoner can offer you, be sure to let me know. You will easily find my house in Grosvenor square."

"It is very kind of you indeed," John said gratefully.

Sophie made a very face as the prince entered the drawing-room.

"Didn't some old Roman once write something about being afraid of Greeks who brought gifts?" she asked, as they descended the stairs together.

"Quite right," John assented.

"Well, be careful!" she advised him.

"That's all."

John handed Sophie into the taxi and took his place beside her.

"Where shall I put you down?" he asked.

"It's such a terribly low neighborhood! However, it's quite close to the Milan—10 Southampton street."

John gave the address to the man, and they started off. They were blocked in a stream of traffic almost as soon as they reached Hyde Park Corner. John leaned forward all the time, immensely interested in the stream of passers-by.

"Your interest in your fellow creatures," she murmured demurely, "is wonderful, but couldn't you concentrate it just a little?"

He turned quickly around. She was smiling at him most alluringly. Unconsciously he found himself smiling back again. A wonderful light-heartedness seemed to have come to him during the last few hours.

"I suppose I am a perfect idiot," he admitted. "I cannot help it. I am used to seeing, at the most, three or four people together at a time. I can't understand these crowds. Where are they all going? Fancy every one of them having a home, every one of them struggling in some form or another toward happiness!"

"Do you know," she pronounced severely, "for a young man of your age you are much too serious? I am quite sure you could be nice if you wanted to," she continued. "How much are you in love with Louise?"

"How much am I what?"

"In love with Louise?" she repeated. "All the men are. It is a perfect cult with them. And here am I, her humble companion and friend, absolutely neglected!"

"I don't believe you are neglected at all," he replied. "You are much too—"

He turned his head to look at her. She was so close to him that their hats collided. He was profuse in his apologies.

"Too what?" she whispered.

"Too attractive," he ventured.

"It's nice to hear you say so," she sighed.

She was unlike any girl John had ever known. Her hair was almost golden, her eyes a distinct blue, yet some trick of the mouth saved her face from any suggestion of insipidity. She was looking straight into his eyes, and her lips were curled most invitingly.

"I wish I knew more about certain things," he said.

"Oh, why didn't you come before?" she exclaimed. "Fancy Louise never telling me about you. I hope you'll ask me to lunch some time."

"I'll have a luncheon party tomorrow, if you like—that is, if Louise will come."

She looked up at him quickly.

"Isn't Louise going to Paris?" she asked.

"Paris? I didn't hear her say anything about it."

"Perhaps it is my mistake, then," Sophie went on hastily. "I only fancied that I heard her say so."

There was a moment's silence. John had opened his lips to ask a question, but quickly closed them again. It was a question, he suddenly decided, which he had better ask of Louise herself.

"If Louise goes to Paris," Sophie whispered disconsolately, "I suppose there will be no luncheon-party?"

For a single moment he hesitated. She was very alluring, and the challenge in her eyes was unmistakable.

"I think," he said quietly, "that if Miss Maurel goes to Paris, I shall return to Cumberland tomorrow."

For a time there was a significant silence. Then Sophie raised her veil once more and looked toward John.

"Mr. Strangeway," she began, "you won't mind if I give you just a little word of advice? You are such a big, strong person, but you are rather a child, you know, in some things."

"This place does make me feel ignorant," he admitted.

"Don't idealize anyone here," she begged. "Don't concentrate all your hopes upon one object. Love is wonderful and life is wonderful, but there is only one life, and there are many loves before one reaches the end. People do such silly things sometimes," she wound up, "just because of a little disappointment. There are many disappointments to be met with here."

He took her hand in his.

"Little girl," he said, "you are very good to me, and I think you understand. Are you going to let me feel that I have found a friend on my first evening in London?"

"If you want me," she answered simply. "I like you, and I want you to be happy here; and because I want you to be happy, I want you to come down from the clouds and remember that you have left your hills behind and that we walk on the pavements here."

"Thank you," he whispered, "and thank you for what you have not said. If I am to find sorrow here instead of joy," he added, a little grimly, "it is better for me to stumble into the knowledge of it by myself."

"Your hills have taught you just that much of life, then?" Sophie murmured.

The prince of Seyre handed his hat and stick to the parlor maid and seated himself upon the divan.

"I should be very sorry," he said politely, as the maid left the room, "if my coming has hastened the departure of your visitors."

"Not in the least," Louise assured him. "They were leaving when we were announced. Sophie and I are taking Mr. Strangeway to a Bohemian restaurant and a music hall afterward."

"Fortunate Mr. Strangeway!" the prince sighed. "But, forgive me, why not a more dignified form of entertainment for his first evening?"

"The poor man has no clothes," Louise explained. "He came to London quite unexpectedly."

"No clothes?" the prince repeated. "It is a long journey to take in such a fashion. A matter of urgent business, perhaps?"

Louise had risen to her feet and was busy rearranging some roses in the bowl by her side. She crushed one of the roses to pieces suddenly in her hands and shook the petals from her long, nervous fingers.

"Today," she said, "this afternoon—now—you have come to me with something in your mind, something you wish to say, something you are not sure how to say. That is, you see, what Henri Gralliot calls my intuition. Even you, who keep all your feelings under a mask, can conceal very little from me."

"My present feelings," the prince declared. "I do not wish to conceal. I would like you to know them. But my words are sometimes clumsy. I would like, if it were possible, to let you see into my heart."

She came over and seated herself by his side on the divan. She even laid her hand upon his arm.

"Eugene," she expostulated, "we are too old friends to talk always in veiled phrases. There is something you have to say to me. You are displeased because I have changed my mind—because I feel that I cannot take that little journey of ours?"

"You mean that you cannot now, or that you cannot at any time?"

"I do not know," she answered. "You ask me more than I can tell you. Sometimes life seems so stable, a thing one can make a little chart of and hang up on the wall, and put one's finger here and there—'Today I will do this, tomorrow I will feel that'—and the next morning comes and the chart is in the fire. I wish I understood myself a little better, Eugene."

"I believe that I understand you better, far better, than you understand yourself," he declared. "That is why I also believe that I am necessary to you. I can prevent your making mistakes."

"Then prevent me," she begged.

"Something has happened, and the chart is in the fire today."

"You have only," he said, "to give me this little hand, and I will draw out a fresh one which shall direct to the place in life which is best for you. It is not too late."

She rose from beside him and walked toward the fireplace, as if to touch the bell. He watched her with steady eyes.

"Eugene," She Expostulated, "We Are Too Old Friends to Talk Always in Veiled Phrases."

but expressionless face. There was something curious about her walk. The spring had gone from her feet, her shoulders were a little hunched. It was the walk of a woman who goes toward the things she fears.

"Stop!" he bade her.

She turned and faced him, quickly, almost eagerly. There was a look in her face of the prisoner who finds respite.

"Leave the bell alone," he directed. "My own plans are changed. I do not wish to leave London this week."

Her face was suddenly brilliant, her eyes shone. Something electric seemed to quiver through her frame. She almost danced back to her place by his side.

"How foolish!" she murmured. "Why didn't you say so at once?"

"Because," he replied, "they have only been changed during the last few seconds. I wanted to discover something which I have discovered."

"To discover something?"

"That my time has not yet come."

She turned away from him. She was oppressed with a sense almost of fear, a feeling that he was able to read the very thoughts forming in her brain; to understand, as no one else in the world could understand, the things that lived in her heart.

"I must not keep you," he remarked, glancing at the clock. "It was very late for me to call, and you will be wanting to join your friends."

"They are coming here for me," she explained. "There is really no hurry at all. We are not changing anything. It is to be quite a simple evening. Sometimes I wish that you cared about things of that sort, Eugene."

He blew through his lips a little cloud of smoke from the cigarette which he had just lit.

"I am not of the people," he said, "and I have no sympathy with them. I detest the bourgeoisie of every country in the world—my own more particularly."

"If you only knew how strangely that sounds!" she murmured.

"Does it?" he answered. "You should read my family history, read of the men and women of my race who were butchered at the hands of that drunken, lustful mob whom lying historians have glorified. I am one of those who do not forget injuries. My estates are administered more severely than any others in France. No penny of my money has ever been spent in charity. I neither forget nor forgive."

She laughed a little nervously.

"What an unsympathetic person you can be, Eugene?"

"And for that very reason," he replied, "I can be sympathetic. Because I hate some people, I have the power of loving others. Because it pleases me to deal severely with my enemies, it gives me joy to deal generously with my friends. That is my conception of life. May I wish you a pleasant evening?"

"You are going now?" she asked, a little surprised. "When shall I see you again?"

"A telephone message from your maid, a line written with your own fingers," he said, "will bring me to you within a few minutes. If I hear nothing, I may come uninvited, but it will be when the fancy takes me. Once more, Louise, a pleasant evening!"

He passed out of the door, which the parlor maid was holding open for him. Crossing to the window, Louise watched him leave the house and enter his waiting automobile. He gave no sign of haste or disappointment. He lit another cigarette deliberately upon the pavement and gave his orders to the chauffeur with some care.

As the car drove off without his having once glanced up at the window, she shivered a little. There was a silence which, it seemed to her, could be more minatory even than accusation.

Mountains of Salmon.

The Skenna river boasts a great number of salmon canneries, and, next to the Fraser, is probably the largest center of this industry in British Columbia. On occasions when the fishing fleet comes in with a big catch, as many as 20,000 to 30,000 large salmon may be seen at one time in a rainbow-hued pile of sparkling beauty.

Profitable Production

How the Government Is Meeting the Farmer Half Way in the Fight for Economic Improvement.

A review of the most significant steps that have been taken in the last few years to benefit the economic condition of the farmer is contained in an article by Carl Vrooman, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, published in the forthcoming Yearbook of the Department. In this article Mr. Vrooman points out that for 50 years the United States Department of Agriculture has been studying how to increase production on the farms, but that it is only very recently that stress has been laid on a study of the problem of making that production profitable. In the past, he says, there has been a mistaken theory that everybody is interested in increasing agriculture production, but that nobody but the farmer is interested in making that production profitable.

That this theory has at last been recognized as fallacious is indicated by important legislation enacted in the last few years. Prominent in this legislation was the creation, in 1913, of the Office of Markets and Rural Organization. The creation of this office, says Mr. Vrooman, "was an innovation of epoch-making significance." This office represents the first attempt on the part of the Government to remedy through scientific investigation the waste and extravagance in our present methods of distributing and disposing of farm products. Long before there was any official recognition of the need for this step, the farmers themselves realized the necessity for it. The Grange movement, the Farmers' Alliance movement, and the Populist movement were all inspired by the conviction on the part of the producers that organization on their part was essential to improvement in their economic condition. The Assistant Secretary points out that while many of the specific remedies demanded by the leaders of these movements were impracticable, their basic demands were just, and he emphasizes the necessity of applying to these problems much the same methods of scientific study which have made possible such extraordinary advances in the production of crops.

In addition to the creation of the Office of Markets and Rural Organization, a number of laws have been passed which are characterized as being of immense economic importance to the farmer. Perhaps the most important one of these is "that financial magna charta of the farmer," the farm loan act. "This," declares the assistant secretary, "is the first financial measure ever passed by Congress primarily in the interest of the farmer. I have no doubt that in the future it will be strengthened by amendments with regard to some of its minor details, as was the Federal reserve bill, but in all fairness it must be admitted that this bill will do the farmer very much what the Federal reserve act is doing for the business man. It will furnish the farmer with those fundamental necessities that he has been asking for, voting for, and praying for, during the past half century."

These fundamental necessities are defined as:

First. Available capital in sufficient quantities for the farmer's legitimate needs.

Second. Loans on longer time and easier terms of payment.

Third. Lower rates of interest.

Another measure cited in this connection is the bonded warehouse act of August 11, 1916. This legislation was passed in response to a demand on the part of the farmers for a mechanism that would enable them to borrow money more easily, and at a lower rate of interest, on stored crops. It permits a farmer to place produce in a bonded warehouse and secure a receipt for it. On this receipt he can easily borrow money, for it represents gilt-edged security. The risk which in the old days the banker took in lending money, even to farmers with good credit, is eliminated by this method and the rates of interest therefore lowered. In addition, the farmer now has a much larger field in which to negotiate his loans than in the days when he was practically limited to those bankers who knew him personally.

The cotton futures act and the United States grain standards act are cited as further examples of recent progressive agrarian legislation. "The latter of these," Mr. Vrooman says, "is a step in the direction of national efficiency and national economic preparedness." Its effect will be markedly beneficial on our foreign commerce in grain. Of the cotton futures act it is said that the net result already has been that the prices of cotton, which are now published every day throughout the country reflect the actual changes in the value of cotton rather than quotations of arbitrary fluctuations created by gamblers for their own benefit, as was too often the case in the past.

In summing up the effect of these and other laws, Mr. Vrooman says: "It is clear, I think, that as a result of this splendid program of constructive legislation, a new agricultural epoch has begun. At last what for so long was merely the hope, the aspiration, the dream of the widely scattered, imperfectly organized tillers of our soil has become the avowed policy of the Federal Department of Agriculture, and has been written by Congress into the law of the land."

The traditional teaching about the cause of asthma is wrong. Asthma is due solely to the overproduction of gas through bad digestion. And every person, young or old, who suffers from too much gas in the abdomen should be cured of his indigestion and not wait until asthma develops. The good effects produced by treatment of the indigestion often begin to be noticed within 24 hours.

JUDGING HORSE'S AGE

Teeth Furnish Fairly Accurate Indication—Yearly Changes Which Ordinarily Occur.

Until a horse is over 10 years old the teeth furnish an indication of age which is fairly accurate. In estimating the age of a horse, only the three pairs of front teeth or nippers on each jaw are considered. Horses, like human beings, have two sets of teeth; the first set, known as milk teeth, being replaced by permanent teeth. New teeth have deep cups, or indentations, at their centers. As the teeth wear down these cups disappear.

A colt does not usually get its first pair of nippers until it is a few days old, but has all three pairs by the time it is 6 to 10 months old. Until a colt is 3 years old, however, its general appearance is relied upon largely to indicate its age. Following is a description of the yearly changes which ordinarily occur in the teeth of a horse.

One year.—The center pair of milk incisors, known as the pinchers, and the pair next to them, known as the intermediates, are well through the gums and in contact, but the corner pairs do not yet meet on a level.

Two years.—The pinchers and the intermediates indicate that they are being crowded by the permanent teeth, as they are pushed free from their gums at the base. By the time the colts is 2½ years old the middle pinchers should be through. The permanent teeth are much larger than the temporary ones.

Three years.—The middle pinchers are large enough for use. Their deep cups show plainly. The milk intermediates are about to be shed.

Four years.—The permanent intermediates appear at 3½ years are ready for use at 4. The corner teeth give evidence that the permanent corners are coming. The cups in the pinchers are about one-third gone. (The tusks, or canine teeth, of male colts may appear about this time.)

Five years.—The temporary corner teeth are shed at 4½ and the permanent ones are ready to use. The horse has now what is known as a full mouth, all permanent incisors being ready to use. The cups of the first pair are about two-thirds gone.

Six years.—The cups in the center pair have nearly disappeared. In the second pair they are about two-thirds gone.

Seven years.—The cups from the second pair are now gone. There is a notch in the upper corner tooth where it overlaps the lower one.

Eight years.—The cups having all worn out of the lower nippers, we now look at the upper jaw. Although cups remain in the center pair, they are not deep.

Nine years.—The cups in the center pair of nippers on the upper jaw have disappeared. They are still present in the other two pairs, being fairly deep in the corner ones.

Ten years.—The cups are worn out of the second pair on the upper jaw, although they are still present in the corner pair.

Older horses.—At 11 years all of the cups are usually worn out of the incisors and it becomes necessary to use some other indication. Estimation of age may now be based upon the angle at which the teeth meet, their change in size and shape. As the horse gets older, the teeth meet more and more at an acute angle; that is, the jaws become more oblique. As the teeth wear down, the shape of the worn ends changes from oval to more nearly round and, finally, in an aged horse, to a nearly triangular form. Sometimes cups are cut or burned in the teeth of old horses to make their mouths resemble those of younger animals. This practice, known as "Bishoping," may be detected if the shape of the tooth and the absence of the ring of enamel which surrounds the natural cup are noted. After a horse is 12 years old its condition is more important than its age in determining values.

Beautiful the Lawn By Flowering Shrubs.

Hardy flowering shrubs grouped in irregular clumps and masses add greatly to the attractive of the lawn, and require but slight care after the first year. There is small initial cost, and while some hoeing is necessary the first year or two little attention will be required afterward except to prune the shrubs each year.

For such planting the Ohio Experiment Station recommends the following as satisfactory: spirea Van Houttei, hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, Japan snowball, rugosa rose, lilac, Lady Stanley althea, bush honey-suckle Morrow, Thunberg's barberry, Thunberg's spirea and spirea Anthony Waterer. The first seven are medium-sized to large shrubs and should stand at least five feet apart in the mass.

Better Soils Result From Sweet Clover.

Besides yielding a larger crop of hay than other legumes, sweet clover improves the condition of the soil and increases its fertility. For these reasons it may become a valuable acquisition on Ohio farms.

Observations made by the Ohio Experiment Station show that the

The use of gold as a substitute for lead or bone as a filling for the teeth was perfected in 1855 by Dr. Robert Arthur of Baltimore, while in 1884 Prof. W. D. ## HOW TO RID MITES IN POULTRY HOUSES

Crude Petroleum Sprays, Accompanied by Sanitary Measures, Will Make Old Yards Habitable.

Lice by day and mites by night furnish the unhappy condition of poultry kept under insanitary surroundings. Treatments for lice are not effective for mites because the latter work only at night, making raids on the fowls from their hiding places in crevices of the roosts and cracks of the building. To destroy mites and keep the flock free of their depredations, insecticide sprays and a sanitary building are necessary. In "Mites and Lice on Poultry," Farmers' Bulletin 801, E. C. Bishopp and H. P. Wood, of the Bureau of Entomology, U. S. Department of Agriculture, tell how a complete renovation can be done.

The presence of mites is indicated by small black and white specks on the roosts—the excrement of these insects. The first step is to get rid of the hiding places so far as possible. The roosts should be taken down and all unnecessary boards and boxes removed. In heavily infested houses the mites are to be found in all parts of the building, including the roof. Where they are less numerous, the infestations usually are confined to the roosts and nests and the walls immediately adjacent. For small coops a hand atomizer will suffice for applying insecticides as sprays, but for larger houses a bucket pump, knapsack sprayer, or barrel pump is desirable. A rather coarse spray should be applied from all angles and thoroughly driven into the cracks. The floor also should be treated, as many mites fall to the floor when the roosts are being removed.

Of the several materials that have proved effective, one of the so-called wood-preservation, consisting of certain coal-tar products, known as anthracene oil, with zinc chloride added, has given particularly good results. Its repellent power lasts for months. The cost is about $1 a gallon, but twice the quantity may be obtained by reducing with equal parts of kerosene.

Crude petroleum is almost as effective, retains its killing power for several weeks, and in most localities is very cheap. It will spray better if thinned with one part of kerosene to four parts of crude oil. Both of these materials often contain foreign particles which should be strained out before spraying is begun. It has been found that one thorough application of either of these materials will completely eradicate the mites from an infested chicken house, but ordinarily it is advisable to make a second application a month after the first, and in some cases a third treatment is required. These subsequent applications may be made with a brush, using the materials pure and covering only the roosts, their supports, the walls adjoining, and the nests if they are infested. This method of application is effective for the first treatment also if the houses are not heavily infested. Poultry should be kept out of the treated buildings until the material is well dried into the wood.

Used as a dip, crude petroleum will also destroy the small mite which causes scaly leg. In dipping for this mite the solution should not be allowed to reach the flesh above the infestation, or to get on the feathers.

How to Grow Celery.

Growing celery for family use by the bed method cannot be excelled for attaining crispness and delicacy of flavor, according to horticulturists of the Ohio Experiment Station after testing various schemes of intensive garden culture for this crop. According to their plan celery may be obtained in the small garden from November till midwinter.

For this crop a level bed four feet wide and as long as desired is selected. A ditch six inches deep full width of the bed, smoothed on the bottom, covered with three inches of stable manure and then with three inches of the best soil saved for the purpose. Soaking the ground causes it to settle. If desired radishes, lettuce or another early crop may be grown before planting celery.

To water the bed a row of three or four inch tile is imbedded about an inch in the surface soil, running lengthwise of the bed and placed a foot from the outer edge of the bed, the two rows of tile being two feet apart. One end of the tile is stopped with clay or mortar and the other end elevated a little, so that a garden hose may be inserted to water the bed. No watering is done except by filling these two rows of tile.

Early in July celery plants once transplanted are set crosswise of the bed six inches apart in rows a foot apart. Golden Self-Blanching and Giant Pascal have proved good varieties, according to the Experiment Station specialists. The plants are watered and the soil is stirred at least once a week. When the plants are nearly a foot high they are banked with soil to the tops, and in late November they are covered completely with dirt and then with several inches of straw. The celery may be used as soon as blanched, but it keeps till midwinter in this condition.

As a hay crop alfalfa is to be preferred to red clover or cowpea hay wherever it can be successfully produced. It is somewhat superior to either clover or cowpeas in feeding value, while under favorable conditions the number of crops of alfalfa produces in one season makes the total yield per acre greater than that of either of these crops.

U. S. TO INTERN I. W. W. TEUTONS

Seattle, Wash., July 14.—The United States government has decided to take out of the I. W. W. organization that part of it which is German or dominated by German influence, according to announcement by United States District Attorney Clay Allen. The men will be interned, Mr. Allen said.

Santa Fe, N. M., July 14.—The governor has wired President Wilson on the I. W. W. situation, requesting that "the federal government take charge and dispose of the matter according to federal law and order."

Phoenix, Ariz., July 14.—Governor Campbell received the following message from President Wilson:

"Secretary of war has instructed General Parker to send officers to Arizona at once to report to him conditions there with a view to co-operating in the maintenance of order. Meantime, may I not respectfully urge the great danger of citizens taking the law into their own hands, as your report indicates their having done. I look upon such actions with grave apprehensions. A very serious responsibility is assumed when such precedents are set."

"WOODROW WILSON."

Food Supplies for I. W. W. Army.

El Paso, Tex., July 14.—A special train with food supplies sufficient to feed the Industrial Workers at Hermanas two or three days was sent from El Paso, it was announced at headquarters of the El Paso & Southwestern railroad. This followed receipt of a report to Brig. Gen. George Bell, Jr., from the officer commanding at Hermanas that the deported persons were in danger of starvation.

Douglas Arms to Stop I. W. W. Return

Douglas, Ariz., July 14.—Citizens of Douglas are prepared for a return of the 1,197 members of the Industrial Workers of the World and their sympathizers who were deported from Bisbee.

Reports indicate that the special train of freight and cattle cars which carried the men from Bisbee was sidetracked at Hermanas, twenty miles west of Columbus, N. M., after the local officers at the latter place had refused to permit the guards who accompanied the train to unload their prisoners there. Hermanas, a junction point on the El Paso & Southwestern railroad, consists merely of the station, a water tank and three houses inhabited by Mexicans.

COMPANY G FLAG IS WORN OUT

Patriotic Order Or Citizen Should Donate New Banner.

Some patriotic citizen or order can win a place of lasting remembrance in the hearts of the members of Co. G by presenting the organization with a new flag for their armory. The old flag has been up since the call to mobilize came on March 26, and the wind and rains have whipped it to rags. With the boys soon to leave for the south, whence they will probably be sent to France, it would be fitting that their military "home" fly a flag every day of their absence.
